GOODBYE DRUMFAD

Linger for a while and h’ld your whisht and let me tell you why, for ‘twas here in July of ’22, that Seamus Moore bid goodbye.

Over the road he took a stroll, with the pink roses all in bloom, to feel the wind upon his face and hear the robin’s tune. For the final time he cast his gaze towards the mountains dressed in blue...

“Oh, sweet Drumfad an’ Benbulbin fair, I’ll miss your gentle hue.

“The ditches, they form a guard for me, for they know I’ve kept them standing.

“Of their ancient stones, some fairies’ homes, I’ll no longer have their minding.

The Holly Bush, with your berries red, I’ll be gone before ye’re here, “And my eyes will close, before the swallows leave my hayshed for another year.

“No more these fields I’ll tend to, no more hear the pheasant’s cry. No sheep I’ll shear, nor the cuckoo hear, for it’s time to say goodbye.

They is cut and the turf is saved - the Bog Road now lies quiet. My chisels, hammers... I’ve packed all away, and now in the Cart House lieth.

Now at Eoinín’s Hill by the Boothery Bush’, sweet woodbine on the breeze, I’ll miss my love and my children dear, but I know it’s time to leave.

A Grá mo Chroí, don’t weep for me, nor worry that I’ve gone, for I’ll still be here at Eoinín’s Hill and my Spirit will live on.
